GENERAL INFORMATION

OVERVIEW: “Miami Neonatology 2015” strives to provide medical professionals with comprehensive knowledge of the leading trends and best practices in neonatology. This course will highlight the most current concepts in the pathogenesis, management and prevention of problems in the newborn infant. “Miami Neonatology 2015” will provide attendees with an extensive educational program featuring new developments in treating conditions that are causally associated with morbidity and mortality in the neonate. Participants will understand the importance of the preventive approach in minimizing medical complications and optimizing developmental outcome. Important topics will include prenatal conditions that may jeopardize the fetus, management of acute neonatal complications, as well as issues relating to long term developmental outcome. The goal of this educational activity is to provide attendees with improved competency, performance and quality of care for newborns.

OBJECTIVES:
Upon completion of this course, participants will be able to:
• Apply the best diagnostic and current treatment approaches to managing viral infections in the newborn
• Determine the most current resuscitation guidelines for managing newborn infants in the delivery room
• Examine novel approaches to optimizing nutrition and growth of low birth-weight, premature infants
• Apply the most current approaches to the diagnosis and management of newborn central nervous system insults
• Assess the etiology of hematologic problems in the newborn infant such as thrombocytopenia and anemia and current approaches to their prevention and treatment
• Determine best practices in applying ventilator management of infants with respiratory insufficiency
• Examine the current approach to the safe monitoring and treatment of premature infants with oxygen
• Relate from the patient’s point of view the long term challenges and life-views of surviving extremely prematurely born infants
• Assess state of the art use of antibiotics in the Neonatal Intensive Care setting
• Assess the pathophysiology associated with both congenital renal defects, as well as acute renal injury in the neonate
